Research Interests

Areas of interest include comparative politics, Middle Eastern studies, social movements, international law, and human rights norms in regards to women's rights and status in society. Specifically, my research is focused on the experiences of practicing Shia women in the United States and the socialization and compatibility of competing standards in regards to liberal and Islamic gender norms and/or gender equality vs. gender complementarity. On a wider scale, I am interested in Middle Eastern and Latin American women and their struggles and engagement with human rights discourses and the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW).
